1. Every son will double share of every daughter.
2. When son of the deceased is alive, brother & sister will not come in the order of succession.

Notes on C

1. When a person dies intestate leaving mother, wife & daughter, the residue share will be devolve on his brother & sister. The brother will get double share of that of sister. If he had no sister, the entire residue share will devolve on the brother.
2. In cases where there is no residuary i.e. no brother or sister, the residuary share will be added to the share of mother & daughter in the same proportion as 'their original shares'. The wife is not entitled to any portion of the residual share.
3. When only one daughter is surviving she is entitled to half of the entire share of the deceased. When the number of daughters is more than one, two- third share of the deceased will be equally divided amongst them.

Notes on D.

(1) If any person dies intestate leaving no son or daughter and his mother and wife were not alive, his estate will devolve on his brother(s) & sister(s). The shares will be distributed in the same manner as shown in notes A, B, C for sons or daughter.
(2) If the deceased person without any issue, had no brother and sister, his wife will get only one-fourth of total share of the deceased, the remaining share will be divided amongst residuaries of preferential side.
